BANGOR.

[ORIGINAL.]
To "M. of Kentucky.
We have read thy greeting, O sister mine,
And our hearts leapt up at that call of thine—Oh! a boon, a rich boon we ask of thee, That thou, of a mind ne'er other than free, Tune thy harp, again, for the wintry north, Again let its strings sound its praises forth.
'Twill warm our hearts, however gloomy and chill
The strong blasts may shriek from valley and hill!
Ay, happy we'll be in our northern land Though wind-furrowed cheeks and toil-worn hands
Yet tell, that Nature ne'er gives us outright The blooming harvest that gladdens our sight, But with healthy air, and free, healthy minds A slothful repose we'll care not to find.
So thou thinkest still, in thy western abode, Of valley and mountain, the stream and the wood,
That, when thou wert with us, in their peaceful rest,
Gave a light to thine eye and joy to thy breast?
Those dauntless thine eyes, whence stamp'd on thy soul
Form bright, prismatic pictures, the tracing of God,
Is lov'd by thee now, though around thee are spread Broad prairies and forests—by rivers, too, fed, So mightily, thou say'st, ours "are streamlets, at best, Compar'd with the dark rushing streams of the west."
But we'll join in them still, our beautiful streams, If not strength yet for beauty unmatched we'll them deem;
Though thy taste in the west be thereby deem'd ill,
We thank thee for the love thou bearest them still.
Look again, from thy memory's mansion! now On dear, old Penobscot, with light on his brow—No "dark brown waters there roll sluggish along."
But clear, glancing waves, that the skies dance among,
Binding ice-letters, off he shook long ago, And lovely green trees dip their brown feet below.
And now wildly leaping comes his graceful child Kenduskeag, with a greeting of dimpled smiles;
When the sun sends it down a glittering ray, Like frolicking stars will its little waves play—
And as light from the moon o'er the scene comes t' roam
Diamonds, upward it flings, to its jewel'd home; Then the water-nymphs rise with pearls in their hair,
While their silver-ton'd voices ring thro' the air.
Down upon this magical scene would you peep?
Look o'er moss spotted glades long termed "Lovers' Leap," Ay, "rocks" we'll love well, for they've serv'd us for "seats,"
At the morn's coming dawn and at noonday's heat,
On "Thomas's Hill," with the city below, Again on "High Head," above wreathed waves, like snow,
No more art thou here o'er our scene'try to look And read therefrom as from a well conned book.
But once and again, with the keen spirits ear, Thy voice, as of erst, we most joyfully hear,
And thy smile which made whilom our home made more bright, Oft visits the soul as a lov'd ray of light.
So content, content, still we'll be, sister mine,
With our less sunny skies and our bleaker climate.
Bangor, June 14th. M. teresting debate sprang up in the U. S. House of Representatives, in which the principles of the two parties in the Union and of the two candidates for the Presidency, were freely and ably discussed. We regret that we have not the room to publish the whole of this debate. Both sides were shown up in a truthful and eloquent manner; and it is both sides which we would desire that the people of this country might read. It was boldly pronounced on the one side, that the new nominee of the "Democracy," was a full bodied, unhesitating enemy to protection; to use the words of Mr. Payne, of Alabama, he was for revenue duties of twenty per cent., but "not one cent for protection." This was one thing he was for, and the other was for the immediate annexation of Texas. These were the issues distinctly set forth by the most able and more immediate friends of Mr. James K. Polk, and these are the issues which the voters of this Union are to pass judgment upon in the next Presidential election. We rejoice that they are thus so distinctly set forth by his friends; and still more do we rejoice that there is no doubt existing as to the true character of this Mr. Polk. He is himself fully committed on these great issues; so fully, indeed, that they cannot be rendered doubtful by the subtleties of partisans here. And what, fellow-citizens, do these issues amount to? What are to be their effects upon the great interests of this whole people? Every body well knows the importance of having a Protective Tariff; we have seen the good effects of it. The whole land smiles under its benign influence. Labor now finds ready employment. The revenues of the Government are sufficient for its use. It has grown up into public favor by its own intrinsic worth. It is the people's measure; their law, their hope—it is to judge of a measure by its fruits, be a sound rule of action, where, we ask, could it or should it receive a more united support than HERE in this city of Lowell; here in the county of Middlesex? People among us are so well convinced of its utility, that they can hardly conceive of its having a foe; it is difficult even to beget suspicion in regard to it; and here is the great error of our people. Do we not see that our greatest men are lending their energies to arouse the people upon this subject, to awaken them from their lanced security? Read Mr Webster's speech at Trenton—and would these things be, unless there was a cause?—read the debates in Congress; look at the record of their votes; look at the resolutions passed at the convention which nominated this Polk and Dallas, look at their public journals every where, and then say if the enemies of the system are not at work to defeat it in the next election. That we shall overwhelm them with defeat there need be no doubt; but at the same time, the best way to make success sure, is to endeavor to prevent defeat.

Then there is the Texas question, the magnitude of which we can but imperfectly realize.
It is, we were about to say, the question of questions. That the immediate annexation of Texas would involve this country in a war with Mexico, Mr. Benton, as well as others, freely and frankly admits. That it would be a violation of the Constitution of the United States, we have the recorded opinion of nearly every member of both parties, of the present Legislature of Mass.
That it would tend to extend and perpetuate negro slavery on this continent, is boldly and unblushingly avowed by Calhoun, Walker, and the Southern Texas advocates generally. That it would be a direct violation of the treaty of 1832, between this country and Mexico, the following extract from that instrument, most unequivocally proves:
"There shall be a firm, inviolable, and universal peace, and a true and sincere friendship, between the United States of America and the United Mexican States, in all the extent of their possessions and territories, and between their people and citizens respectively, without distinction of persons or places." That it would render our Government liable to the debts, amounting to over twenty millions of dollars, of Texas, thus giving fortunes to scrip-holders out of the pockets of the people of this country, and that too, at a time when the people of many of the States cannot, or will not, pay their own debts, is too palpable to require demonstration.
These are a few of the claims which these mere effigy candidates, present for the support of the people. If we have presented one statement which is not susceptible of immediate proof we wish to have it pointed out; and that these two questions, free trade and Texas, when brought before the people for their decision, will prove the doom of Polk and Dallas, aside from their insignificance as statesmen, when compared with the nominees of the Whigs, there is not the remotest doubt.

The Whigs of the whole Union are united as one man, upon a MAN, as well as upon principles. They go into this struggle full of confidence and hope that triumph will crown their labors; to doubt it would be to doubt the capacity of the people for self-government. The nominations are now before the country. The "intense enthusiasm," for Polk and Dallas, of which we have heard, but have been unable to discover, is already subsiding into a gentle zephyr, and it will require the powers of the fabled Aeolus, to raise much of a breeze hereafter. In the meanwhile we would admonish our friends not to relax one iota of their efforts; get fully organized, be all ready, and when the hour comes, pour in your broadside and blow the enemy sky high. [Lowell Courier.]

The Machinery, and Movements in the late Baltimore Convention.
The Whig reporters, who attended this Convention, have thus far refrained from exposing such of its extraordinary doings, as seemed not legitimate matter for a report, perhaps from courtesy, or perhaps, because to report them, would be travelling beyond the record. The scenes, bye-play, and unofficial acts of this Convention are then yet to be reported;—and as the reporters of the so-called democratic papers keep silent, if the People are to know them at all, they must know them through the Whig Press.
It will be recollected that Mr. Saunders, (a Calhoun man) on the morning of the first day, called the Convention to order, and on his motion, a Mr. Wright, (an anti Van Buren man) of Pennsylvania, a name unknown to the country, if known in Pennsylvania, was put in the chair pro tem, till the Convention could be organized.
This, no doubt, was pre-arranged among the anti Van Buren part of the Convention. It was of the highest importance for them to have a friend in the chair, in the temporary organization, and by means of their activity, and the inactivity of Mr. Van Buren's friends, they contrived to get this presiding officer. After this temporary organization was completed, the Secretary, young Mr. Ritchie, of Virginia, being also anti Van Buren, the next movement of the anti Van Buren men was to convert this temporary chairman into a permanent presiding officer.
It appeared, as the event proved, that they had studied his character, feelings, and preferences, and in whom it would have been difficult, if not impossible, to find a President more unscrupulous.
This was effected in the Committee selected from the States to name the organization by creating a dispute there between the Van Buren and anti Van Burens, which was settled, as such disputes usually are, by keeping Mr Wright, who was a most efficient presiding officer, in the Chair. Thus in Mr. Wright, nominated by Mr. Saunders, a Calhoun man, was concentrated the power of the Convention in the first instance to determine upon its rules and orders.
This Mr. Wright, we have said, made a most efficient presiding officer. We have seldom seen an abler one. With energy of manner, and determination of character, he united an unscrupulousness in decisions, that compelled the Convention to yield to his will, often in defiance of common sense, and throughout, in defiance of common justice. The first contest of the anti Van Buren men was for the two-thirds rule—Mr. Walker, of Miss., came prepared to contend for that with the proceedings of the three preceding Conventions, as reported in Niles's Register. Mr. Butler, who acted as Mr. Van Buren's Attorney General on this occasion, was so unprepared, that he had to borrow Mr. Walker's book to see his precedents! Mr. Wright, the presiding officer, when the States came to vote upon this two-thirds rule, took it upon himself to decide that each State might either cast its votes unanimously for one or the other side of the question, or give a divided vote, as a majority of the entire delegation should direct. Mr. Butler assented to this most fatal decision, that is, he did not oppose it. It turned out in the end, as Mr. Butler ought to have foreseen, that this decision killed off Mr. Van Buren, by enabling the anti Van Buren men to carry the two-thirds rule. Massachusetts and Pennsylvania were the only States that divided their votes. If the Van Buren majority in these States had cast their votes together against the two-thirds rule, that rule would not have been carried, and Mr. Van Buren would have been nominated on the 1st ballot. Or, if the district system of voting had been adopted, such as the Calhoun men had been urging in their newspapers, the per capita votes in all the states where Mr. Van Buren had friends, more or less in all, certainly more than any other candidate, this district system would have defeated the two-thirds rule. Virginia, however, by sending 53 delegates, when entitled to only 17, Mississippi too, by contriving to have more delegates than electoral votes, Louisiana, by having only two for her whole representation, as well as some other states, which did not have their full complement, prevented as the speaker decided, the adoption of the per capita system in these states, and made it necessary to give the vote

Our cause is just—our union perfect.

Whig State Convention.

The Whigs of Maine will meet in Convention on the 26th inst. and it is very desirable that every town should be fully represented both in the Convention for nominating Governor and Electors, and in the Mass Convention of the People to be held at the same time. The work before us is an important one.

To the whigs is committed the best interests of the State and Nation and much, very much depends upon their vigorous and united action. The measures which the whigs advocate for the promotion of the interests of the people of the State are such as strongly commend themselves to the enlightened judgment of a vast number of the intelligent men among our opponents—They desire to see these measures carried into operation. They wish to see capital invested in our State in works of internal improvement, in manufactures and in developing our resources and in encouraging the industry and aiding the prosperity of the people. They know an opposite policy will be pursued so long as their party is in the ascendancy, because their leaders are so strongly committed against the whig policy. Let the whigs go boldly forward then and every where spread their principles and measures before the people, and they will find help, strong sustaining help coming in upon them to secure their triumph.

The great national interest of securing the independence of the country, and the well being of the people by causing ample protection to be given to the labor of the people, is an interest of untold importance. Here the whigs should labor with a zeal and energy corresponding to the greatness of this interest that comes home to the business of every man. The policy of our opponents is to leave labor unprotected, and to allow the industry of the country to be crushed beneath the weight of foreign competition. There are many patriotic right hearted men among our opponents who have hoped and hoped against all hope that the leaders of their own party would see and embrace this great doctrine—this truly democratic American policy. But then the last peg on which the slightest hope could be hung has been removed by the doings of the Baltimore Convention, and the only alternative left them is to vote with their party and against the well being and well doing of their country or vote for their country with the whigs and against the leaders of their party. In such a case they cannot hesitate in coming to a conclusion.

The whigs in voting for their party, vote for the best interests of the country and all the people of the country, excepting only a lot of men who devote themselves wholly to seeking and receiving the pay of office. The locus on the contrary in voting for their party, vote against the country and against the great mass of the people and in favor of the little knot of political leaders.

True patriotism now calls loudly upon every man to go with his might for his country, and for the prosperity and happiness of her great people. The great majority of the people of our Union see, acknowledge and feel this to be a duty, and will again rally in the might and majesty of 1840, and re-establish and clinch the policy of the government as then decided. Of this no reasonable man can doubt after surveying the field. The whigs of the Union compose the real democracy of numbers, and whenever a full vote is polled their majority comes up with a noble heart cheering emphasis.

What we now desire is, that this honorable, patriotic, right minded majority of the Union, should be heartily responded to by the people of Maine. To this end let the whigs in every town direct their energies. Meet often in public assemblies—scatter political papers and documents—let no man remain in ignorance of your principles—get out all the voters and our success is sure, even in Maine.

Let our friends lose no time in holding their primary meetings and choosing their delegates to the State Convention. A noble spirit is aroused in the Whigs that will lead on to triumph and victory.

The Salem Register remarks that the two-thirds rule was invented by Mr. Van Buren himself in 1832, out of enmity to Mr. Rives. His bloody instructions have returned to plague their inventor.

Important from Washington.

SPECIAL ANNEXATION—VETO OF THE EASTERN HARBOR BILL.

In the House of Representatives on Monday a message was received from the President of the United States, communicating all the documents and papers in relation to the negotiation of Texas, and urging the House to take immediate measures for carrying the annexation into treaty by legislation.

The President expressed a determination to pursue this subject to its issue. It is evident that he will not relinquish it on account of any opposition. We shall therefore see some sights yet.

Mr Hopkins moved that the message and documents be referred to the committee on foreign affairs and printed.

Mr Adams offered two resolutions; first, that the power to declare war be vested exclusively and expressly in Congress; second, that any attempt on the part of the President to exercise this authority, whether with or without the assent of the Senate, is an invasion of the rights of the House, and ought to be resisted by every means in his power.

The vote on suspending the rules to receive the resolution was, yeas 78, nays 108.

The previous question was called for, and the message referred.

After some unimportant proceedings, another message from the President was announced and read.

This message returns the Eastern harbor bill, with objections. He objects particularly to the appropriations for local works at Richmond and Petersburg, Va.

The Speaker then put the question—"Shall the bill pass notwithstanding the objections of the President?"

The question was taken, amidst a great deal of noise and confusion, if not of excitement. The yeas were 103, the nays 84.

There not being a constitutional majority of two-thirds, the bill was not passed.

So the bill is killed by the veto, though there is a majority of 19 in favor of it.

The Western harbor bill has been approved by the President.

He was not particularly acquainted, he says with that matter. He did not know the localities, &c. Perhaps he was fearful that the West would resent his interference in their matters.

Important from Havana.

Latest accounts from Havana state that an order had been issued to arrest Mr Bush, Editor of the Utica, New York Observer, for some remarks he made last year in reference to the insurrection at Bemba.

Mr Bush arrived at Matanzas about two months since in very ill health, but fortunately left for the United States, a few days before the issuing of the order.

A few days ago an Englishman was arrested in the same place, for the seditious speech he made in the city of New York two years since.

Information has been received that a naval force has been despatched from the U States for Matanzas, with the full power to bring the Spaniards to their senses.

The Galveston Civilian comments indignantly upon the declaration made by a correspondent in that city, of the New Orleans Bulletin, to the effect that Texas has not the elements of an independent existence, and must seek the aid of Great Britain, if that of the United States be refused to her. The editor declares such assertions unwarranted by facts and injurious to Texas as a nation.

The President's new Texas message inquires, and the Madisonian openly declares, that evidence of British designs upon and movements in Texas, not yet published, was communicated to the Senate, and will be found among the documents now sent to the House.

The evidence is in the shape of private letters, and the names of the writers are not given.

Court Courier.

Charles Kendall of Newport was on Thursday put on trial for maliciously injuring and defacing the dwelling house of Dr Benson of that town by daubing the door and front end of the house with black paint. The trial occupied about a day's time. The jury yesterday returned a verdict of not guilty. McCrillis and Waterhouse for prisoner.

George A. Brown was then tried on a charge of larceny for stealing six bunches of shingles from a wharf in Brewer, the property of Isaac Farrar, Esq. and others. The jury returned a verdict of guilty. Hatch for prisoner.

Mr Murdock.

Mr Murdock delivered last evening a free, introductory lecture on the subject of vocal gymnastics or the exercises for the cultivation and management of the Human Voice. Mr Murdock's system is based upon the scientific and physiological principles laid down by Dr Rush, and has been generally approved and highly commended by those best qualified to judge of its merits.

He brings with him the highest recommendations, and although he does not profess, what is entirely out of the question, to make eloquent speakers in a few lessons, he does believe that he can impart a sufficient knowledge of correct principles to enable a man to exercise the vocal apparatus for the strengthening of the voice and giving it tone and flexibility.

During his stay in this city Mr M. will give instruction to classes, and will, also, in company with Mr Johnson give several public courses, of a character, we doubt not that will be highly satisfactory to our people.

The Maine Conference of Congregational Ministers and lay delegates, will assemble at Bath on the 25th instant, and probably remain in session nearly a week. This conference is usually very numerous attended and probably will not be less so this year than formerly.

Temperance Mass Convention.

There is to be a mass Convention at Orono on Monday and arrangements have been made for an extra train of cars on the Rail Road for the accommodation of all who wish to attend. This convention will undoubtedly be one of much interest and will exert a happy influence upon the cause of temperance throughout the county. As many as can make it convenient should be sure and give their attendance.

There will be an adjourned meeting of the Bangor Temperance Association this evening at the Rev. Mr. Pomroy's Meeting House. It is expected that Messrs Dow and Walton of Portland, will address them. Citizens generally are invited. June 15. Per order.
